TVR®512 Universal Collection

The classic 1950s Universal frame made famous by James Dean in the film 'Rebel Without a Cause' remains as one of the most highly regarded styles in the 21st Century. Made completely by hand from solid Japanese Zylonite, this model features the 5-barrel hinges for strength and support as well as the long-lost diamond 'W' rivets. The curve and rim shape is slightly rounder than a trapezoid while the horn rim silhouette is thinner. The keyhole bridge also provides easy, comfortable fitting and a graceful appearance. True Vintage Revival owns one of the few remaining original Universal moulds from 1950s, and using this rare museum-quality piece to recreate every detail that goes into the highly appreciated TVR®512.
